Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate -- we can not consecrate -- we can not hallow -- this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here,

11 But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate -- we can not consecrate -- we can 12 not hallow -- this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, 13 have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will 14 little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what 15 they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished 16 work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather 17 for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us -- that from 18 these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave 19 the last full measure of devotion -- that we here highly resolve that these dead
20 shall not have died in vain -- that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth 21 of freedom -- and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, 22 shall not perish from the earth.
